CITY OF BROOKFIELD POLICE DEPARTMENT

REPORT

September 20, 1971

In the matter of C.R. 71-8291 dated 9/8/71

To Chief William A. Wolcott

City of Brookfield Police Department

Sir:

On this date contacted Mr. Jim Doherty, at his residence on Highway P, regarding his previous report suspected betting at the Lime House, 13175 W. Blucmound Rd. Brookfield. Mr. Doherty wasn't sure of the date of the incident, however to the best of his knowledge was Sunday, September 5th. He stated he had talked to Sheriff Robert Baird on Monday, Sept. 6th and reported the activity. On Tuesday he had talked to a Detective on the Sheriff's Dept. (who confidentially advised that he didn't think much was going to come of it because the Lime House was frequented by persons from the Court House). On Wednesday, Sept. 8th, he was in Brookfield and talked to Chief Bill Wolcott about what had occurred.

Mr. Doherty added that last Thursday, Sept. 16th, he was paged at the Sentry Store in Mukwonago, that there was a phone call from Sheriff Baird. This was about 10:30am, which he thought was very unusual, and the Sheriff informed him that he had turned the Lime House Investigation over to the Federal authorities. Mr. Doherty's understanding when he had talked to Chief Wolcott was that he also intended to refer the matter to Federal authorities.

On an earlier date you reported certain suspicious activity, alledged to have occurred at the Lime House, 13175 W. Bluemound Rd. in Brookfield.

Do you recall what date and day this was, and the time of day?

Yes, it was a Sunday afternoon, about 5:00pm, I think it was Sept. 5th.

What happened on that date?

Well, the first thing I wondered about was the number of cars on the parking lot, there were at least 35 on the lot, and the bar was empty. When we looked into the dining room there were only about 12 people having dinner.

Who was with you?

There were three of us, My wife, my daughter and myself.

What did you do when you walked in?

Like I say, the bar was empty, and we sat down about 3/4ths of the way, just to the west of the cash register. We sat there about 15 minutes before we had dinner, and had a few drinks. We wern't sitting there no 3 minutes when this guy walked in, started talking about horses with the bartender, and handed him $4.00 "on the daily double for tomorrow". The bartender took the money, and placed it in a brown envelope which he took from behind the bar. He wrote something on the envelope and then dropped it into some type of container on the back bar.

I have read the foregoing statement and it is true and made of my own free will.

Then another guy came in and ordered a Bloody Mary with Tobasco sauce. He put $4.00 or $5.00 on some particular horse "in the 2nd". The bartender did the same thing with the envelope. A third customer came to the bar a short time later, and put $10.00 on some horse to place in the 3rd.

Were these bets made openly then in your presence?

Yes, I was just amazed at what was going on.

What happened then?

Well, these three bets I described occurred in the fifteen minutes we sat at the bar. Then we went to a table to have dinner and I took a chair so as to observe any other activity. While we sat there for the next half hour I observed at least 4 or 5 more persons hand money to the bartender who put it into, and wrote upon these same brown envelopes.

Do you have anything else to add about this matter?

Well, I just wonder where all these people were whose cars were parked outside on the lot. I had an occasion after that to talk to the operator of a place in Elm Grove, and casually asked him if the Lime House was a good place to eat, and If there were living quarters upstairs. This operator said that they have the upstairs set up for gambling. I seem to recall seeing someone coming down the steps on the east side of the building when we were in

Would you be willing to testify to your observations at the Lime House?

In the matter of LIME HOUSE

To W.A. WOLCOTT

CHIEF OF POLICE

Sir:

Upon checking the Lime House in plain clothes with clerk [redacted] we observed the following that would indicate the possibility of gambling on the premises. At about 6:20PM an unknown person was talking to the bartender and made the statement that he was a "happy handicapper" then left the bar.

It was also noticed that a racing form was ever present on the wast end the bar near the phone. The bartender made several calls and during the calls referred to a slip of paper that was in his shirt pocket. We were unable to hear any of the convers that took place on the phone.

Just before we left a Japanese looking person sat at the bar and placed a large roll of bills on the bar but the bills were not touched while we were there.

It is my opinion that there is gambling taking place over the bar and that it is mostly in the open although we were unable to observe any transaction at this time.

I believe the gambling consisted of placing bets on the races with the bartenders at the Lime House.

Respectfully submitted,

Ptm. [redacted]

observations are set forth in his statement, which is attached hereto.

When DOHERTY appeared at the Brookfield PD he was concerned because he had inquired of the sheriff of Waukesha County regarding any activity on their part in investigating the gambling charge. He said Sheriff BAIRD, Waukesha County, advised him that he had referred the gambling allegation to Federal authorities, which he took to mean the FBI. (A check of office indices did not reflect any references to this location indicating gambling investigation.)

Copies were made of all reports and investigation conducted by the Brookfield PD, which were made available by Captain [redacted]. These reports are attached hereto.

Re memo of Supervisor [redacted] 9/22/71.

On 11/1/71, Captain [redacted] Brookfield, Wisconsin, Police Department, advised the Lime House Supper Club has held a Glass D Combination Liquor License in Brookfield since 1962. Offers of this Corporation were listed as follows:

Captain [redacted] advised initial information regarding the possibility of gambling on horse races taking place at the Lime House Supper Club came from JAMES A. DOHERTY, 5450 Brown Street, Oconomowoc, Wisconsin, a former detective on the Waukesha Police Department. DOHERTY, while having dinner at the Lime House Supper Club during September, 1971, observed individuals contacting the bartender giving him money and placing bets on horse races. The money and bet slips were placed in an envelope kept behind the bar.

Captain [redacted] advised he had an opportunity to conduct physical surveillances at the Lime House Supper Club; however, these surveillances developed no information regarding gambling activities being conducted on the premises.

b7C

During November, 1971, [redacted] advised he was familiar with the owner and operator of the Lime House Supper Club having known [redacted] for many years. He described [redacted] as an avid horse player and was aware individuals could place bets on horse races at the Lime House Supper Club for races being run on the following day. The money and bets were then handcarried to the Illinois race tracks on the following day where the money was paid at the Paramutual windows.

b6
b7D

JAMES A. DOHERTY, 5450 Brown Street, Oconomowoc, Wisconsin, advised that during September, 1971, he took his wife and children to the Lime House Supper Club on a Sunday evening for dinner. While having cocktails, he observed two or three individuals approach the bartender to make horse bets on horses which were running at Illinois tracks on the following day. It was his understanding that someone connected with the Lime House Supper Club would take this money to the track and bet it on the following day.

As the situation described above, wherein an individual gives money to another individual, who in turn bets this money regularly at a race track in Northern Illinois, does not constitute a Federal violation of the Gambling Statutes, it is suggested this case be placed in a closed status.
